Specifications

Advanced Laser Scanning Confocal Microscope (LSCM)

The Naval Research Laboratory desires an advanced laser scanning confocal microscope system for high resolution optical sectioning of thick (>50 microns) samples.

At a minimum, this system must:

1. Incorporate or be compatible with an existing Leica DM/IRB inverted microscope.
2. Be capable of confocal imaging in both reflectance and epi-fluorescence modes; objectives for both modes should have sufficiently long working distances to allow for imaging of a biological cell culture growing on the bottom of a standard 35mm culture dish without necessitating the removal of the dish cover.
3. Be capable of imaging a common range of visible spectrum fluorophores, including fluorescein, green fluorescent protein, rhodamine, and Cy5 dye.
4. Allow for direct (not requiring hardware replacement) upgrade to ultraviolet excitation of fluorophores in confocal imaging mode by addition of an ultraviolet (UV) laser.
5. Allow for maximum adjustability toward the true spectra of a wide variety of existing and newly-developed fluorophores in the UV and visible spectrum with minimal re-investment in hardware (i.e. filters) or software. System must have at least three reflected / fluorescence channels, each having continuously adjustable ranges of 380-800 nm with spectral resolutions of 5 nm.
6. Be directly upgradable to two-photon (picosecond) excitation using infrared pulses for non-destructive imaging of biological samples.

The LSCM will be a complete workstation platform, with laser, optical, and electronic subsystems integrated into a mechanical isolation platform. The laser subsystem will include HeNe, Argon, and Kr lasers coupled to an Acousto-Optical Tunable Filter (AOTF). The optical subsystem will incorporate a true confocal optical path with one pinhole in the excitation pathway and a computer-controlled detector pinhole. The optical subsystem will include a motorized stage with fine and coarse focus. Electrical power to each subsystem will be for 208 V, 50/60 Hz.

Computer facilities for the system must include, at a minimum, a Pentium II workstation with 128 MB of RAM and applications software for the Microsoft

Windows NT operating system. The computer must contain a small computer system interface (SCSI), a hard disk having at least 4 GB of storage space, a floppy and a CD ROM drive, an external SCSI controller, an Ethernet board, and 2 color monitors, each having a minimum of a 17" display.

The vendor shall provide, together with the system delivered, all necessary user's manuals for the various subsystems and for the computer software supplied with the system. The vendor shall offer to the Government at least the same warranty terms, including offers of extended warranties, offered to the general public in customary commercial practice. The vendor shall provide for on-site installation, set-up, and system check out.
